[double rule]

A MELANCHOLY MAN

I<sup>2</sup>s one, that keeps the worst Company in the World, that is, his own; and tho' he be always falling out and quarrelling with himfelf, yet he has not power to endure any other Converfation. His Head is haunted, like a House, with evil Spirits and Apparitions, that terrify and fright him out of himfelf, till he ftands empty and forfaken. His Sleeps and his Wakings are fo much the fame, that he knows not how to diftinguish them, and many times when he dreams, he believes he is broad awake and fees Vifions. The Fumes and Vapours that rife from his Spleen and Hypocondries have fo fmutched and fullied his Brain (like a Room that fmoaks) that his Understanding is blear-ey'd, and has no right Perception of any Thing. His Soul lives in his Body, like a Mole in the Earth, that labours in the Dark, and cafts up Doubts and Scruples of his own

Imagination, to make that rugged and uneafy, that was plain and open before. His Brain is fo cracked, that he fancies himfelf to be Glafs, and is afraid that every Thing he comes near fhould break him in Pieces. Whatfoever makes an Impreffion in his Imagination works it felf in like a Screw, and the more he turns and winds it, the deeper it fticks, till it is never to be got out again. The Temper of his Brain being earthy, cold, and dry, is apt to breed Worms, that fink fo deep into it, no Medicine in Art or Nature is able to reach them. He leads his Life, as one leads a Dog in a Slip that will not follow, but is dragged along until he is almost hanged, as he has it often under Consideration to treat himself in convenient Time and Place, if he can but catch himself alone. After a long and mortal Feud between his inward and his outward Man, they at length agree to meet without Seconds, and decide the Quarrel, in which the one drops, and the other finks out so the Way, and makes his Escape into some foreign World, from whence is it never after heard of. He converses with nothing so much as his own Imagination, which being apt to misrepresent Things to him, makes him believe, that it is fomething elfe than it is, and that he holds Intelligence with Spirits, that reveal whatfoever he fancies to him, as the antient rude People, that first heard their own Voices repeated by Echoes in the Woods, concluded it must proceed from some invisible Inhabitants of those folitary Places, which they after believed to be Gods, and called them Sylvans, Fauns, and Dryads. He makes the Infirmity of his Temper pass for Revelations, as Mahomet did by his falling Sickness, and inspires himself with the Wind of his own Hypocondries. He laments, like Heraclitus the Maudlin Philosopher, at other Men's Mirth, and take Pleafures in nothing but his own un-fober Sadnefs. His Mind is full of Thoughts, but they are all empty, like a Neft of Boxes. He fleeps little, but dreams much, and foundeft when he is waking. He fees Vifions further off than a fecond-fighted Man in Scotland, and dreams upon a hard Point with admirable Judgement. He is just fo much worfe than a Madman, as he is below him in Degree of Frenzy; for among Madmen the most mad govern all the rest, and receive a natural Obedience from their Inferiors.